Introduction

Sandra Cisneros (b. 1954) is registered as a prominent writer in the Chicana literary movement. She has won numerous awards, including the National Medal of Arts and the National Book Award. Her first novel, The House on Mango Street, is a series of compressed, lyrical vignettes which center around a Latina girl growing up in a Chicago barrio. From her little red house, the protagonist describes her life and the neighborhood around her. In Esperanza gives readers a glimpse into her dissatisfaction with the present and her hopes for the future.
